

Marathi Movie Club - A MMBAYAREA Event

Sukhaant:

Does one have right over one's death? The film raises the ultimate question as a quadriplegic mother demands justice and her lawyer son struggles between his love for his mother and doing the right thing.

Short Synopsis

When fiercely independent, self-made, single mother Sitabai meets with an accident that deems her quadriplegic, her life changes forever. Her son, Pratap, a successful lawyer, makes it his life to take care of his bed-ridden mother. Even as her dear ones surround her with much love and attention, unable to live at other's mercy, Sitabai awaits death everyday. Everyday, she pleads her son to not tie her down with his love and relieve her of her suffering. Pratap, unable and unwilling to grant her this peculiar wish, struggles to do the right thing as his mother shows no signs of recovery.

Days drag on; adamant Sitabai has given up food and her condition deteriorates further. When he can no longer bear to watch his helpless mother suffer, Pratap decides to move the court to grant his mother her wish to end her life. Does one have the right over one's death? The film raises the ultimate question and examines what it means to be alive. It asks- under what condition could euthanasia be considered humane and thus a better option than being forced to live on?
